I think most shops would be willing to rig up a rod to let the customer take it for a "test spin". I know you can do this at Bass Pro in Harrisburg, so I'm sure smaller shops wouldn't have a problem with it.

For the most part, I use my 7'6" 4wt on smaller streams where the 9' 5wt would be more of a hassle to cast and navigate with. Still enough backbone to lay out a cast, yet small enough to work through the brush with.
