

Subject: : Stream Reports

Topic: : Neshannock Creek, Lawrence County 12/9/12

Neshannock Creek, Lawrence County 12/9/12

Author: : fishingnoob

Date: : 2012/12/9 18:11:15

URL:

Ripped some lips on the Neshannock today from 12:30 till a little after 3 when it started to pour. Didn't expect much since I went to cool spring yesterday and didn't get a single bite. The water here was also high and muddy following the rains earlier in the week. Used two split shots with the deep water and slung 3 flys the whole time with minor switches. All were caught behind the shop. First 2 caught were while I was slinging a pink crystal meth, san juan worm, and red lighting bug nymph with both taking the san juan. I then switched to an orange glow bug, kept the san juan, and tied a green weenie on the end. The last fish of the day was a MONSTER as seen from the photo. Easily 15-16 inches (wish I had a tape measure) taking the green weenie. This one fought HARD and I was glad to get him to hand because he snapped the line when I grabbed him. All in all a decent day considering the weather.

Attach file:

