I have a few questions about this approach...

1. Will they be stocking the early sections during the extended period? Making "opening day" fish harvestable in March?
2. How will they be able whether fish in possession where taken in the early opening areas or elsewhere while they are being transported back to the home of someone living in the later opening areas. "What these fish? I caught them in Berks county..." Says the man to the PFBC officer while at a rest stop in Clearfield.
3. Will they be policing both the Stocked western streams and the eastern streams? I think not...they don't have the manpower to do either, properly at any other time.
4. Will they be ending the stocking of the early streams 2 weeks earlier than the last stocking of the western streams?

I say get rid of opening day all together. Stock year round (or at least a lot earlier) Having a two month fishing season is stupid anyway. At least thats why eastern fishermen say they need an earlier opening anyway. They claim theres no fishing after June 1st. No opening day...fish earlier. Many streams are fishable as early as February. Stocking in fall and winter will create amny more fishing opportunites.

But thats just my opinion...
