I agree with Phish_On - if you need/want it and can afford it, GET IT!

I can't, so I'm stuck with the same equipment I had since before I even fly fished. A rusty safety pin holds my license to my head, and my vest pockets are filled to the brim.

How can fishing possibly add back pain? Even the most avid fishermen don't pack hundreds of pounds on their vest. Even if they did, how much do they fish that they would be an issue? Sounds crazy to me.

I have a fancy pair of LL Bean Waders because of the lifetime warranty. I am fully capable of saving up for equipment that, if it doesn't last me forever, will be replaced for free.
