Sas,

I do a blog on my website, which I started two year and I do my best to put something on there twice a month. Believe me it was one of those things that I thought no one out there would pay attention to, but boy was I wrong. I guess people like reading about other peoples experiences on the water. And Chaz I have to laugh at your question. I had to go look up what a blog was when I was thinking of adding something new to my website Ha Ha. But I have been on some of the guys from PAFF blogs and websites and I enjoy reading about there days out on the water. It's great to see what everyone else is doing out there. It makes me feel like I want to be right there with them. And PLEASE no one take this as an advertisement from me. Just want to share the experience. I agree with Fishidiot there's so much information on this site about outings which makes it one of best sites to come too. And I do post here from time to time about some of my trips. But for me it's plain and simple " It's just fishing" and I think good reading.
