If you have the Best of the Planing Form they have both drawings and specs for both hex and quad forms or Ray Gould books also have drawings and specs (excellent books) for hex, quads and Pentas. Some online info can be found at <http://www.thomaspenrose.com/form01.htm> or other bamboo rod building sites. Building your own forms is the cheapest way to go if you have the time and some basic equipment. I bought both my hex and quad forms. I have not played around with pentas yet but if a set of forms comes up for sale that is affordable I might.
