Down in the valley they draw down so much water for irrigating out of the "West Gallatin" its really nothing to get excited about-far more interesting from mouth of Gallatin canyon up stream/south.

The lower Gallatin from where east and west branches meet is one of the least appreciated stretches in the state as its tough to get at and hard to wade fish[deep].You know there are some huge fish in there but good luck getting to them.

Rattlesnakes can be expected in the rip rap in lower valley but none from Canyon to headwaters as its hard rock country with no dens.
