I've sanded and shaped a fair number of rod grips and it's time consuming and difficult to do this. If you're taking a lot off, it's also difficult to get a symmetrical shape unless you turn them on a lathe. With that said, you can still get a decent shape by sanding manually. Sometimes I'll use a file or wood rasp if I want to really take off cork/wood. Take your time and work slowly and keep "eyeballing" the handle by gently spinning it as you look down the handle.
