

Subject: : Fly Fishing Locations

Topic: : Penns Creek / Lil J Float

Re: Penns Creek / Lil J Float

Author: : troutbert

Date: : 2013/1/3 8:26:06

URL:

Quote:

midnightangler wrote:

Unless you are planning to go after high water, I don't recommend floating either of these streams. They tend to attract a lot of wading anglers and you will spend more time dodging them than you will fishing. You won't make many friends in the process.

If you're targeting high water, 600 cfs and up will chase most wading anglers of the LJR and around 800 cfs on Penns. You will have a fairly narrow window between when the wading anglers are off the streams and when the high flows will start to make things a bit interesting.

I agree. These streams are really not very large. Such a craft would be better suited to substantial rivers such as the Susqy, Juniata, Yough, Delaware, etc.