

Subject: : Conservation

Topic: : New road stuff.

Re: New road stuff.

Author: : Lonewolve

Date: : 2013/1/5 10:27:33

URL:

Osprey,

It's called Brine, and from my understanding its a liquid sodium/magnesium mix. It can dry on the road before a snow/ice storm hits and when the storm hits it is ready to go. They have been using it for a few years in the Lehigh Valley/Philly area.

The thing that worries me is what does this brew do to the trouts streams..or hell to any stream/brook or river?

I wish they just used Sand like they do out west, Maybe Limestone sand would work. Any how thats whats being used and it does a pretty good job if they get it down before the storm hits.