Becker - everyone knows PA raccoons are not native. They are a mix of stocked and wild. Most stocked ones are harvested in the spring or die off when the weather gets too warm. The wild ones were introduced from a strain that originated in Germany and can successfully reproduce when conditions are right..

that's what i was saying yesterday.

I saw a game warden walking along the riverbank with a bucket of fingerling coons.

I asked him if they were wild....

wild ? he said, they're fricking furious !
