The fingerling stocking idea may have been sarcastic. I agree it probably won't work since the problem is the environment.

Yes, I was being sarcastic and at the same time cause some critical thinking about the Fall stocking/limit policy.

Obviously the Susq problem is the environment, and therefore requires a solution much broader than any given locality or stretch of water. I don't think it's just the Susq.

I wonder if simple steps can be made to reduce the overall cumulative causes of stress like improved medicine disposal & runoff control - while the expensive and time consuming studies continue.

After all, the studies just might find that the issue is the cumulative effect, not one silver bullet.
