

Subject: : Fly Fishing Locations

Topic: : outer banks

Re: outer banks

Author: : pcray1231

Date: : 2013/1/9 13:14:02

URL:

pwk, on the sound, there are places you can fish from shore. There are more where you can wade around large areas in waste deep water and toss stuff at the holes and drop-offs. A boat is best, just gives you a lot more mobility.

Can it be productive? Sure! Never as consistent as the ocean in my experiences though, from boat or from shore. Like Swattie, I've had many times on the beach where you can pull croakers in 2 at a time all day long on a rig if you'd like.

Wife and baby. Not a fishing trip. Unless I forego the offshore idea and charter an inshore boat, I'm not gonna get much fishing in on the sound side. I got my one day pass to get serious about it. The other days, though, we'll be doing family stuff. When on the beach with family, throwing a rod out and sticking it in a sand spike is one thing, and there will be some of that. Taking off for the sound side or inlets is a different ball game.

May not even take a fly rod.