The large trout being caught in the lower Delaware are hard to specifically target. They are generally caught accidentally and they've always been caught by guys tossing hardware or bait.

All of the larger brooks or browns that I have caught below the trout section of the river have either been caught on hardware or centerpin gear.

I love fishing the Delaware because you never know what is going to be on the end of your line. Trout, smallies, stripers, walleye, muskie... they all eat the same foods and can occupy the same areas.
