I'd like to start him on the fly because bait casting and spin fishing are one of the easiest things to learn. Fly fishing gives more experience when it comes to the outdoors in general. Learning bugs you never knew about, determining what structure is best to fish for your "target" fish and eventually, tying your own flies for pennies instead of buying them for $2-$3 each. PennypackFlyer, I've never been that type of teacher. I believe to a certain extent that kids need to learn, then once they are taught it's up to them to ask questions. Sure I might chime in every now and then if he's doing something he shouldn't be, but he's extremely patient when it comes to fishing. If I could go back and do things over, I'd learn to fly fish first.
