I'm using a gama 130 that I lengthened with heavy wire. The 130 is a standard lenght oshagnassy hook. The wire loop is Kinda like the loops they put on old school salmon flys.

You could probably use a wadington shank and tye it tandem like a streamer with the front shank being the head. That's the cool thing about these fish. There's so many different configurations and ways to tye these flys. The head is shaped balsa covered in 1 coat epoxy. It's rock hard.
