

---

Subject: : Fly Fishing Locations

Topic: : Mainstem Delaware

Re: Main stem Delaware

Author: : sandfly

Date: : 2013/1/18 9:53:35

URL:

Quote:

You've posted that tiger pic countless times. Tigers aren't sea run browns.

fish read my post;

never said tigers are sea run browns just stated they are there easier to catch. I have caught sea runs myself, though i don't have pics (before I started to take them) they are there. N.J. and pa. will not recognize them. for what reason they will not say. Mr. schram was a fly shop owner that spent countless hours on the delaware. Once you get below trenton wing dam water is very tidal and deep something sea runs like. to shock the river would be almost impossible as the size and depth of the system. Average hole on lower river is over 20 feet in depth. temp samples of these holes average 55-65 deg. even in summer..For the states to do a viable study on the lower river would cost millions I would think and there for they rely on fishermen alot. All I got to say about this if anyone has ??? pm me..

Hey did you know there are Piranna caught at trenton every year when the shad run..shadders catch them at the wall...(have to see it to know the wall)