Read the book, it's very good.

Dwight, you've never seen the movie? Or liked the book better and just didn't mention the movie.

I find it very arrogant the way that movie is viewed by people who had already begun their flyfishing journey. The way they look down on people who started after or because of the movie. I think it was a wonderful movie that involves a pasttime we all love. You can appreciate it for the actors, the story or the fishing....whats not to like? Unless you think you are better than others...in which case there is no pleasing you because in any situation you view or analyze you will feel superior to the subject and therefor look down your nose. But thats just who you are....

Not you dwight...curious why you never saw the movie. Were you affraid of it, what it might do to your reputation if someone heard? Never had a VCR or DVD player? Certainly over the last 25 years the opportunity had to present itself and you declined.
