Just remember. You get what you pay for. Sometimes it's better to save up a little to get boots the will last more then a season. With that being said. I have ruined a pair of rivershed simms boots in less then 2 years. If they where any other boots they wouldn't have lasted 6 months. Still wear my riversheds, but they are in dire straights. Got a pair of G4s waiting to replace them.

I agree, you get what you pay for. I got 4 years out of my last pair of Simm's Guide Boots. I put alot of miles on them and time in the stream and just recently replaced them with an identical pair. This time however I installed the star cleats instead of the studs.
