looks like it's walkable, maybe 5 blocks or so? I'm up for it, always have a soft spot for greasy diners. now, the question will be what time? I'll be up early, so 7-7:30 would work for me, plenty of time to eat and BS, then hoof it back for the 9:00 show opening.

lunch? last year we did the irish place, annies something? good food, but I'm always up for something different. the show was actually much more enjoyable a little later in the day after the crowd died down a bit, actually had time and room to talk to the tyers and such.

last year we had dinner with TimRobinson at some little place that I can't remember the name, but it was packed with people and the food was good, maybe he will remember. it was only a block or so away from the hotel.
