Just as a heads up. For anyone travelling, keep an eye on the weather. Decent sized system coming through.

Lot still to be worked out, it could of course go north or south, be a day early or late, etc.

But right now looks like a widespread 3-6, 4-8" overrunning (not a coastal) type of event. Mostly Friday and Friday night, but certainly still around NJ early Saturday. All snow for much of PA. May or may not be a snow changing to rain/ice mix in along the Md border, as well as in Philly/NJ. That'd lower snow totals, but a potentially bad ice storm is no walk in the park from a travel perspective.
