Prince's are my go to fly if I am dredging the bottom. I have never had any problems with blots being too thin or thick, but it is not a bad idea to at least take a look at them before buying. I used to have the biggest problems tying in the wings because of my fat sausage links. I have learned to use a pliers or tweezers to hold both wings and tie them in at the same time.

Here is a variant I have been tying up lately. These are size 12's and I wanted to tie something that was big enough that resembled Iso, stonefly, and other larger nymphs. Basically my anchor for high sticking.
