In a stable popn, there are fewer fish over 14 inches than any other size class. With that in mind, it makes sense to allow a harvest of fish in a smaller size-slot because there are more of them to lose. Those who know seem to believe that there are relatively few trout harvested from the Penns TT because most anglers are already practicing C&R. So, it should theoretically be better to allow that small harvest to come from a size class that will lose fish through other forms of mortality anyway. Makes sense to me.
