I am re-reading stuff I haven't read for a while. I just re-read W.D. Wetherell's "Vermont River," and it was a nice read. He does stray from actual fishing at times, though. I am now on "Upland Stream," and it also reads quickly. I plan to finish re-reading my 3 Wetherell books, the third being "One River More." For those of you who enjoy reading, Wetherell's writing is excellent, and when he is actually fishing in the books, you do feel like you're there. (Yes, I actually do fish; I don't just read. In fact, I might fish as many as parts of 150 days this year; I can't help myself.)

To RLeeP: I recall your writing ability and style. I think you have a lot of good things that you could and should put into a book. I wish you would write one.
