I caught one last summer while bass fishing in a warm water stream. I guess there was a little spring or something under this log keeping him cool enough to survive because the water was WARM. He took a black bugger, barely fought, and was belly up by the time I brought him to hand.

Tasted good with some homemade dill mayo and sauteeing him in some butter and garlic though.

Besides that, I'll only keep a flounder or kingfish here or there from the surf in the summer. Always C&R trout whenever possible.
