

---

Subject: : Fly Fishing Locations

Topic: : White Clay Creek

Re: White Clay Creek

Author: : Khprager

Date: : 2013/1/28 11:44:06

URL:

The WCC DH in PA preserve has trout year round..there have always been hold over trout since big fish over 20 are caught while no 20" fish are stocked. The DH section of the creek has limited holding water except for large rocks and rock formation which are many. When you are not seeing fish you should target the rocky areas with weighted nymphs banging the rocks with the offerings. In the past 27 years this strategy has been effective. Many attractor flies and streamers are good fly choices. If you read through the flyfishingdelaware.com blog you will see many patterns that were trout catchers. Right now a small black offering that represents a little black stone fly is producing. Try smaller sz 18/20 non description nymphs or oversized streamers with yellow bodies now too.