The Letort is a stream a lot of history and much written about it back in "the day." I do wish that some folks with foresight (and some political pull) would have preserved it a little better by allowing a decent riparian zone in some sections where development was allowed right up to the bank.

It is unique, but as FI said, from the angler's perspective, it's just a trout stream. Nearly all anglers have difficulty with the slow currents and weed beds, but there are plenty of trout in it to fish for....give it a try....just watch your step.
