I know far less than many of the other people on this post.

The decline of the SMB very closely mirrored the decline of dandelions in neighborhoods across the state.

I was one of those neighbors who you would hate to live beside. Never used "weed and feed" or anything herbicide related. When I first moved in the bass were everywhere and so were the dandelions. When I left there were no dandelions and there were no bass.

It was kind of suburban culture thing that happened. Whether it had anything to do with SMB is anyone's guess.
