I have fished the Letort a lot and for a long time. Klingy nails the best advice so I do not want to be redundant. The one thing I would really hammer on is going slow. The biggest problem I see with LeTort rookies is the speed with which they try to fish it. I was sitting on the Bonny Brook bridge talking with a friend who lives right there one afternoon. I was planning on fishing but a car arrived and two guys proceeded to walk up to the water I was planning on fishing. I didn't mind as I fished the LeTort nearly every day at this point in my life. They returned after covering the water in about 30 minutes tops. The same stretch they covered, about 30 yards give or take, would take me at least 2 hours to cover. The worst part was I knew the stretch would be dead now for awhile because of their approach.
