i use 4ft of red berkley fireline loop knotted to the fly line and nail knotted to 5/6ft of 5X fluoro.

i've found that long leaders or heavy tippet make no difference in fast runs over 4ft deep in big rivers.

which is where i fish this rig on a 9ft 5wt using two flies on 12" 5x apart.

i've not really figured out the benefits of a longer rod for this - other than avoiding deep wading, but that defeats the whole point of bottom rolling a short line for trout, grayling or steelhead for traditional high sticking in small clear streams, hell yeah - scots wets were originally fished on 11ft rods in burns.
