I thought about packing the gear and stopping after work, but I'm not sure the timing on the rain is gonna be right...I think the forecast is for the more significant rain to move into the SE PA area in the late afternoon/early evening...might be too late to bring the flows up if you're planning on fishing today. Valley's running at 21 cfs right now (pretty low), and I usually struggle there unless the flow is more in the 35-50 cfs range.

Valley rises and falls VERY quickly, so if we get some good rain tonight tomorrow afternoon might be decent flow wise...but it will be 20 degrees colder too.
