The fishermen were not "off" at the Jam. The river was. It's a pathetic excuse for a smallmouth river now. Even upstream. This area is screwed for smallies

If I remember correctly, Maurice was using a spin rod (just to find the fish or course) and he still couldn't catch anything?

It's really a shame, and probably can't be returned to the World Class river it used to be. But these "scientific" tests they use now are really only a couple guys walking near the shore to shock the tiny fish and count how many have fungus spots on them?

The graphs you show don't seem logical to me! And the few fish left are almost all "unisex" and sickly with legions? And all the stinkin' silt on the bottom now, and the 90 degree water temps, and the rocksnot on almost every stinkin' rock!

It's kinda sad for a fly fisherman like me, but the trout are still here and the bluegills in the lakes are doing fine!
