

---

Subject: : Fly Tying

Topic: : Swimming Nymphs

Swimming Nymphs

Author: : InTheMend

Date: : 2013/1/31 20:00:24

URL:

Here are some swimming nymphs I tied up. I think im going to call them " freestyle nymphs " but that is still up in the air. I dont know how fishable these things are but they at least look cool. The idea behind this fly was to move away from this notion that , " I'm tying on a ' special ' hook, so I have to make the fly super complicated and realistic. I just wanted a practical fly in a little bit of a different " pose". Anyway that's my thinking, tell me what you think, looks, fishabilty, etc. I was planning to straight line them with mix up of active and passive drifts/retrieves.

P.S. - I know my photography needs to improve, I need a better camera. Also, if anyone wants the tying recipe/instructions I can put that in the tying forum. Lastly, I got a shutout from Matt Grobert, creator of caddis chronicles - heres the link -<http://www.caddischronicles.com/>. Im in the Somerset article, second down, and I am mentioned in the third paragraph, along with a picture of my fly. Anyway, thanks!

( Click on the picture for a better, right side up image! )

Attach file:

 Swimming_Nymphs_converted.jpg (193.54 KB)

