A good magnifier really helps tying these flies!

Yeah, I have the standard mag glass with the light around on a swing arm..... still, the 22's are hard to tie!

Getting the beads on the hook, I used tweezers with hackle pliers to hold the hook. Still I dropped half of them on the rug! I still can't find a couple? LOL

But, in the cold water, the trout seem to like the tiny flies so much better than the normal size?

PS - Flashback: about 3 years ago, I spoke with you wgmiller at Muddy Creek FFO (downstream by the Hemlocks) and you said that you caught a couple on size 20 dries. When you left, I took off my regular size 12 woolybugger and tied on a midge dry 20 and I was smackin' the trout pretty good right under the Hemlock trees! A very late "Thanks" to you! LOL
