As everyone has said, the best thing to do is try them out somewhere. I will say this, I won't go cheap on a kayak ever again - I tried it. Most of the lower end models don't track real well, aren't real comfortable to sit in, and have poor seats. I have a pungo angler 120, and love it. Four rod holders, camera mount, fish finder, etc., and I have lots of room to move around and storage for overnight trips.
