yep no problem unless you weight 1,000 pds.

Hobies ain't cheap and you don't want to drag them over rocks but they are worth the money.

Suggest you go for the 11 footer over the 9 footer as they are much faster as they ride a little higher weight for weight.You would be surprised the difference those 2 inches make.sorta like trying to keep up with a 1,000 cc bike using a 750.Tried that once in the paradise valley in Montana back when there was no speed limit.Broke my heart but he pulled away from me at speeds where telephone poles looked like a picket fence.I was about 40 years younger and dumber.lol

No kidding,length is an asset,not a liability.However we are talking $1800.

Fish a lot-worth it,if not well there are others but I love my Hobie down here in Florida.It becomes part of you.I have handled rough water that would scare you [huge wakes from big ships] as long as you are length ways you bob like a cork.
