I'd don't understand why you compromise at a flyshop, but not online. Especially stores like Cabela's and Orvis. You still pay sales tax (they have stores in PA) and shipping. IDK if it is still true, but if you buy a bunch of stuff from FFP they ship for free (but check this). I did not find that tying materials (other than beads) are cheaper on-line versus FFP.

I'd suggest that since you are building materials, a visit to Fly fisher's paradise in SC. They will set you up with all the goodies you will need for CENTRAL PA.

they have a website that you can order from if you like on-line, but a in-store visit is the best. Especially during the week. When it comes to materials, it is best to look and feel. However, if travel up is out of the question, give them a call. You can ask them to put together a package of stuff for tying for you. You can still order on-line.
