biblio.com is another option. Try using Google Shopping too; some of the independent booksellers that are out there must have been sold a software system that allows for publishing or feeding their inventory to Google Shopping. I managed to snag three copies of the late 1800's Report of the Commissioners of Fisheries (PA), which contain early Denton fish prints, using Google Shopping. I couldn't find the specific books from the specific booksellers advertised anywhere else.

alibris and abebooks both allow you to sign up and receive coupons, which are usually in the form of a percent off.
