Hit FS for a couple hours around mid day. Weather conditions were very warm, probably mid 60s, blustery with light rain and very dark skies. Despite the recent snow melt, water temp was 50 degrees and levels were normal for FS with a slight stain. I figured with the conditions, the bite would be pretty good but fishing was slow. Managed to stick four fish, all small bows, with one on a streamer and the rest on scuds high stuck in runs. No rises or insect activity. Fished until I was driven off the water by a torrential downpour early in the afternoon.

I was fishing letort 1/30 and was lucky enough to be back in route to the car before the downpour. I looked like I had just gotten out of the shower. What a water dump!
