

Subject: : Warm Water & Salt Water Fly-Fishing

Topic: : Muskie in swatara behind hersheypark

Muskie in swatara behind hersheypark

Author: : jkilroy

Date: : 2013/2/9 13:08:26

URL:

Just wondering, anyone ever try and target muskie on the fly in the section of the swatara creek behind hersheypark? I've wondered about that, I know they stocked it in years past with muskie hybrids. The water there is deep and slow and there is lots of trees down which would make for good cover. What would be the best approach to go there to see if any lurk there, spinning rod first?

I've always wanted to catch a muskie on the fly but I hate to do all that blind casting and go home with nothing but a sore arm flinging around a 10wt all day long. Last year floating the juniata river I saw a monster when I was out for smallies, he was well over 4' mingling around with a bunch of carp in a deep pool. That was definitely a river monster.