I love Gfen's post! I think that's perfect. I'm relatively new to fly fishing also - been at it for 8 months or so. My first 3 months involved me using only size 14 adams dry flies in my local stream. I didn't even try nymphing until a few months ago - mostly because this little stream has lots of dumb little browns that will consistently take an adams. Definitely keep it simple and work on the technique! Fancy patterns and alternative setups are fun to mess around with once you have a basic understanding of the sport.

One small thing I'd add to gfen's post - if you can find them, use beadhead nymphs - they're already weighted, so you don't have to mess around with splitshot.
