

Subject: : Beginner Forum

Topic: : Broken Fly Rod Question

Re: Broken Fly Rod Question

Author: : Fishidiot

Date: : 2013/2/10 16:23:21

URL:

Hi Dave,
If Biggie's option doesn't work out, I'll second Salmonoid's.

I build all my fly rods so when I break 'em I have to cut 'em up and recycle what I can - usually just the reel seat and guides. Nevertheless, I currently use a 10WT that I accidentally broke a couple inches off the tip. Just glued a new tip-top guide and it casts fine - I can't tell the difference (although it should be pointed out that I'm not a rod connoisseur). In your case, it seems you broke off a bit more. The rod may feel a bit different and may not cast quite as nicely but for a tight budget it should continue to cast adequately.