

Subject: : Beginner Forum

Topic: : Broken Fly Rod Question

Re: Broken Fly Rod Question

Author: : FlyGuyFromPa

Date: : 2013/2/10 17:09:13

URL:

When my tip broke, I took the tip off of the broken section, put it on the rod and used a pair of pliers to secure it. I didn't pinch it, just LIGHTLY snugged it to the rod. I've been using it this way for almost 5 months with no issues. This is NOT the best way to fix a rod, but it may be a temporary solution for you. I'm sure others will back me up in saying this is in no way, shape, or form advisable. If your budget is anywhere near mine, it might be a "have to" type situation. Even I advise against using this method, but I had zero funds to work with at the time, and it's been working, and I haven't even thought about fixing it the proper way until I read this thread.