I think that having a rod which matches your casting, fly type, fish, and stream size is more important than having an expensive rod. Put me on a 12' wide brook trout stream with #14 adams flies and the best rod may be a < $200 model from st croix, elkhorn, echo carbon, or tfo finesse. Of course I am completely ignoring versatility, just pointing that the available rod which best fits a certain type of fishing for one fisherman may not be an expensive model.
