My fishing hat is now over a decade young and better than when I bought it. It is leather, was once suede I suppose. It's an outback hat, made in Australia, that I bought for a ridiculous sum at a rodeo in Houston, just outside the astrodome.

It looks kind of silly, and I recognize that. But it covers my face from sun, has a wide enough brim that not a drop of water touches my face or neck. I've put enough leather conditioner and silicone spray on it that I'm not sure leather is the predominant ingredient anymore. I do know that you can literally dunk it, pull it up, give it a shake, and the entire thing is dry to the touch.
