I think mine's actually a different brand, I'll have to check, but basically the same thing. Mine is a 3" brim and I'd prefer 2.5 or 2.75". For me, anyway, a flexible brim is important, i.e. "crushable". If it were a shaped hat I beat on mine so bad it'd be so bent up and never regain it's shape.

It was pretty waterproof from the start. But I load up the inside leather with leather conditioners like you'd use on boots (I use obenhauf's LP), and I have about 20 applications of silicone spray on the top, lol. It's almost ridiculous how much it beads water.
