

Subject: : Beginner Forum

Topic: : Lesson in humility at Little Lehigh

Re: Lesson in humility at Little Lehigh

Author: : dc410

Date: : 2013/2/13 23:29:27

URL:

I also was on the Donegal earlier this week and saw quite a few rises in one area. There were definitely midges in the air but there were also BWOs coming off which is fairly common early in the season on limestone creeks especially on an overcast day. I really didn't have much with me to imitate either one. I put on the smallest thing I had, a size 22 bunny trico spinner. I promptly caught a rainbow, which was pretty cool catching one on top in February, and on a trico none the less. After I accomplished that I quickly changed to a size 8 weighted olive wooly bugger and caught quite a few bouncing the bugger on the bottom. It was great to spend a few hours on the stream.