

Subject: : Fly Fishing Events and Meet-ups

Topic: : Lake Marburg Seminar - 16 Feb 2013

Re: Lake Marburg Seminar - 16 Feb 2013

Author: : 1wt

Date: : 2013/2/14 0:04:03

URL:

Quote:

Fishidiot wrote:

Marburg is one of the few lakes I fish on a somewhat regular basis as I personally prefer flowing water however I'm looking forward to this event and hope to attend.

Fishidiot,

Thanks, dude. They had one last year at the exact spot. I'll be there.

I know a couple "Euro" carpers who fish that lake all the time. They use 12' rods with a "hair rig" system and mount the rods on neat electronic bite sensors. Don't laugh, I purchased a couple 12' rods myself! LOL

You said that you don't fish that lake in mid summer? Well, that is the best time for fly fishing! Every afternoon the big bluegills and schools of white perch roam the top. You can see the hundreds of fish making wakes on the surface. I've caught hundreds on top (water depth is around 20') with a 3wt and unweighted nymphs or unweighted white woolybuggers.

No matter how hard it rains, Marburg is always clean and clear. Almost no pollution, it's a fly fishing paradise!

Thanks again for the Head's Up,

1wt