I remember reading somewhere that the seal population was becoming a problem there. its funny how things work out in nature. only thing that would be cooler is if the white sharks start exploding on the seals like they do in south Africa.

i know lots of guys love to bring their yaks out around that area and jump right in. nothing like seeing bass in shallow water. only a few places in jersey that I can think of that are close but the water is usually to dirty in our area. and the fishing is not as accountable like in the cape cod area.
