Oh so you're just starting out? Winter's a rough time to learn to fly fish, I think. I've been at it for like 8 months now, and I can tell you that I had a lot more fun learning when it was warmer outside. The fish are a lot more active even in the heat of summer than in the winter.

Plus when it's warm you can use dry flies, which in my experience is easier and a lot more fun! Also when it's warm out you can catch some sunnies after getting skunked! Lol. Makes those tough days a little better if you can at least get something!

I haven't had any luck with glo-bugs, but I've heard they work for some people. If I catch anything (which feels really rare lately), I catch them on scuds or hare's ear nymphs. Also found a pattern called "czech mate" that seems to work well, at least on the stream I fish.
